WOMEN CAN CONTROL RESULT OF THIS ELECTION

Declaring that only a small turn-over of votes was needed in any of the twelve western woman suffrage states to change the result of the big presidential election in November, Mrs. William Kent, of Kentfield, Cal., wife of Representative Kent, national chairman of the Wilson non-Partisan League, told the representatives of the Woman's party gathered at Colorado Springs in conference this week, that they held in their hands the power to secure a federal amendment enfranchising the women of the nation.

"The time has come for the fulfillment of this dream which many years ago came into the vision of Susan B. Anthony and a few other women, but which gradually spread until today it is the desire of a vast majority of the women all over the United States," said Mrs. Kent. "The women today have the political power to demand their rights; and they propose to see to it that justice be extended to every woman in the United States."

"Only a small percentage of the more than 4,000,000 women votes in the West will be sufficient to determine election results at the polls in November. Not all of these women will vote with the Woman's Party, some of 'em dividing along old party lines. Many women will remain away from the polls; so will many men. That will not alter the result and does not change the important political fact that those voting with the Woman's party for the best interest of the federal woman suffrage amendment, will have a balance of power vital to the interest, not only of the political party desiring our support but vital also to the cause of woman suffrage in the United States. The women of the West will not fail in their duty to themselves and to the other women of the nation. Let us fulfill now the task so worthily begun by those before us who have worked to bring about the passage of a national amendment enfranchising women."

CLEAN HANDS

Disease germs lead a hand to mouth existence. If the human race would learn to keep the unwashed hand away from the mouth many human diseases would be greatly diminished.

We handle infectious matter more or less constantly, and we continually carry the hands to the mouth. If the hand has recently been in contact with infectious matter the germs of disease may in this way be introduced into the body.

Many persons wet their fingers with saliva before counting money, turning the pages of a book, or performing similar acts. In this case the process is reversed, the infection being carried to the object handled, there to await carriage to the mouth of another careless person.

In view of these facts the U. S. Public Health Service has formulated the following simple rules of personal hygiene and recommends their adoption by every person in the United States.

Wash the hands immediately before eating.

Wash the hands immediately before handling, preparing or serving food.

Wash the hands immediately after using the toilet.

Wash the hands immediately after attending the sick.

Wash the hands immediately after handling anything dirty.

COWGIRL WRITER VISITS YUMA

says the mass of misinformation acquired in regard to the desert travel will be an interesting memory. However, at El Centro and Holtville she found actual people who had been across, to her great relief. They told her it was quite an undertaking, but that it could be done.

At the Alamo store a piece of good luck awaited her, as she found some people driving across, so she rode with them to the well, and the next night, by traveling all night, she reached shade and water by sunrise—a happy, but sleepy woman.

A little later she expects to continue on to New York and then back to Seattle, using the northern route.

The trip is made for a number of reasons: Health (she has gained 23 pounds), outdoor work and a love of outdoor life and adventure (her ancestors were Vikings). She has made it an outdoor trip. Her little white dog, her companion and guard, rides with her. She has been clipped in deference to the weather, so you may not think she is pretty; but she is.

They have camped on the mountains, on the ocean beach, in the redwood and numerous valleys and at last on the Great American Desert.

Her camp outfit is necessarily light, as it is all carried on the one horse. She carries no tent, but a piece of canvas and a blanket. Clothes outside of riding togs, are a luxury. A few cooking utensils and groceries fill one saddle bag. A camera is an important item.

Miss Thinglestad represents the Pacific Outdoors, an outdoor magazine to which she is a contributor. The subscription work covers her expenses.
